Susan B. Anthony A Lifetime Of Fighting For Equality

Susan B. Anthony was born on February 15, 1820, in Adams Massachusetts. She had a total of seven siblings growing up. She was born and raised in a Quaker family. Her family moved to Rochester, New York when she was 17 because of the Great Depression. As a child, she was a good and determined student. When her school refused to teach her long division, her father taught her at home instead.

After teaching for a good long 15 years, she became active in temperance. No, this is not some therapy thing for people with anger issues. It's a "social movement against the consumption of alcoholic beverages." Because she was female, it was against the rules for her, or any female, to speak at a temperance rally. Because of this, and because of meeting another female rights activist (Elizabeth Cady Stanton), she joined the women's rights movement at the age of 32 in 1852. Only a tiny bit later, she decided to dedicate her life to fighting for equality. She is most well known for fighting about women's voting rights and women's rights in general but, she also gave speeches about ending slavery.

She died on March 13, 1906, in Rochester, New York. She is proudly remembered throughout America for her courage, stubbornness, faith, and determination. She once said, "I don't want to die as long as I can work; the minute I can not, I want to go." This shows just how serious she was about equality and her job of fighting for it.

Some famous quotes from Dr. King:
The ultimate measure of a man is not where he stands in moments of comfort and convenience, but where he stands at times of challenge and controversy.

The time is always right to do what is right.

I look to a day when people will not be judged by the color of their skin, but by the content of their character.

If you can't fly then run, if you can't run then walk, if you can't walk then crawl, but whatever you do you have to keep moving forward.

Our lives begin to end the day we become silent about things that matter.

Aaron Judge

The Trip Up: When Judge played for the Trenton Thunder he wasn't anywhere near as good he is now. Even though he was called the hammer, he wasn't. In triple AAA he was mediocre compared to what he is now. In AAA he was pretty fast and could play 1st base.

His Power: Aaron Judge - the judge and jury, the living nuke. The man who set the all time homerun record for a rookie, may someday beat Barry Bond's record of all time homers, and longshots for a season, is probably the best all around player in the majors today. This season he hit 50 longshots and a 500 foot bomb. The furthest this season. Some say that he is the best of all time, especially me.

Aaron Judge's Jury: Aaron Judge has a full jury. High in the right field seats there is a full court with a jury and its Judge down below, (hardly because he is 6 ft 8 in). The Judge someday might actually hit a homer into his jury.

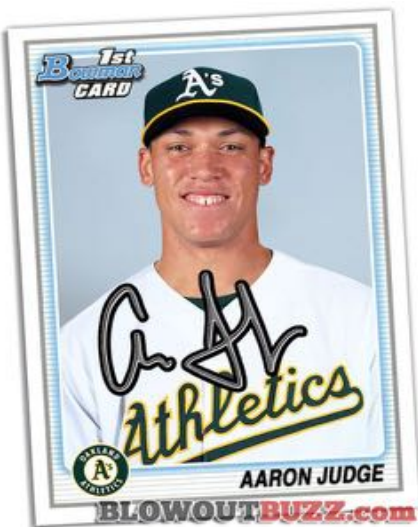

Another cool fact about the jury is that one time the real life Judge bought a ticket for the jury seats.

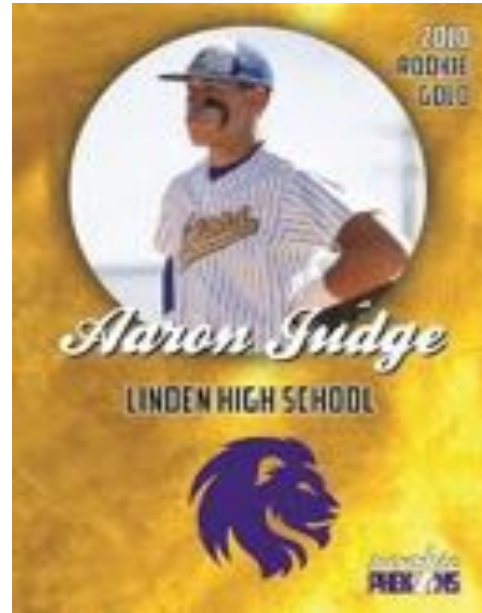

The Year Before His Power: His first year, Aaron Judge was not really good. He batted 179, hit 4 homers. Struck out

Famous People In The United States Historical, Celebrities, and Sports

24 times and was terrible. He made a really bad first impression, but still made the team the next year. The next year he hit 52 homers. Which you probably already know is the new record for a rookie! I think that they made a good choice in doing that. P.S. He only had 48 at bats that year so he struck out exactly half the time.

Almost Traded: During the first quarter of the season, he was slumping and was almost traded to the Oakland Athletics. He regained his amazing power and ended up not being traded. Imagine if he was traded.

The Young Bomber: In High School, Aaron Judge did not play outfield, he played first base. He hardly even knew how to play in the outfield. He also could barely hit ten homers in his High School season.

Shaquille O'Neal

Shaquille as a Child: Shaquille O'Neal was born March 6, 1972 in Newark, New Jersey he was taught to play basketball like he does now by his stepfather, who would make him practice before eating.

Adult Career: Shaq was on six major NBA teams the Lakers, Miami Heat, Orlando Magic, Phoenix Suns, Cleveland Cavaliers, Boston Celtics. He was drafted number one overall by the Orlando Magic in 1992 then after that he went on to win the NBA Most Valuable Player Award with the Los Angeles Lakers in 2000 as well as three straight NBA Championships before helping the Miami Heat win the franchise's first ever NBA Championship in 2006. I would say that he was one of the greatest players ever.

His Team Numbers: Big Shaq made the numbers 32, 34, 33 practically famous on the Lakers he was 32 and on the Miami Heat and Orlando Magic he was 34 on Phoenix Suns he was 32 and on the Cavaliers and the Celtics he was 33.

Awards: Big Shaq has won plenty awards in his basketball career and he is known well around the world for his free throws at least 75% of them go in the hoop. As you can see on the bottom those are only some of his awards.
